currency?

The local currency in Bali is Indonesian Rupiah (IDR). The amount of money you should bring will depend upon the total length of your holiday and your spending habits. It's very easy to get by in Bali for $300 - $600 a week. This will cover your food, souvenirs and having fun. However, try and budget for the higher end of this – it's a once in a lifetime trip, so make the most of it!

How shall I access my money while I'm travelling?

We recommend to bring a debit card / travel money card with you with so you can withdraw cash as you go. ATMs are available throughout Bali. Alternatively, you can bring your local currency to exchange when you arrive, your group leader can help you with where to go. Try to only get out enough to cover you for a few days at a time so you're not carry around lots of cash.

Do I need vaccinations?

Your Ultimate Bali Tour Guides will do their best to keep you safe and healthy in Bali. However, one dodgy mosquito bite or a bad case of the runs could ruin your holiday, so it pays to take a few sensible precautions. The following is a rough guide for vaccinations in Bali, so we suggest seeing a GP with expertise in travel medicine who can review your individual health issues.

Don't forget to ask for numbing cream if you're worried about pain from the injection.

You are strongly recommended to have Hepatitis A vaccine (Hep-A sucks big-time!)

You may also need Typhoid vaccination (Good for nasty stomach bugs)

MMR vaccination is also recommended

Rabies pre-exposure vaccination may be an option, but not essential

Malaria isn't common the areas we visit, but stock-up on bug-spray as there are other diseases such as Dengue that are more common.

Ideally you should organise all this about 4-6 weeks before departure, but it is never too late.

Do I need a visa for Bali?

Depending on the country of your passport, there are a few options available to you to gain entry into Bali.

Free Visa: the majority of nationalities can obtain a 30 day visa exemption on arrival to Bali, this will be non-extendable. Available to those from the UK, USA, Australia, Germany, Ireland, Netherlands, Belgium and more. For a full list please research with the Indonesian Government.

Visa on Arrival: For those on the free visa country list that want to stay longer than 30 days, you will need to pay US$35 on arrival.

Visa Before Arrival: All other countries will have to apply for a visa before entering Bali at an Indonesian consulate.

For all visa options, you will need to make sure you have at least 6 months validity left on your passport from the day you plan to leave Bali, and in most cases you may need to show evidence of your departing journey. Visa information for Bali can change without our knowledge, so please take this information as advice, and check with the Indonesian
